THE TRADE BALANCE

Adverse exchange rates against Canadian money in the United States are beginning to make Canadian buyers sit up and take notice.

In border cities the exchange has gone up to ten per cent, and those most affected by it are trying to foot themselves into believing that this is a slight on our coin. This is not the case. Our coin is one of the safest in the world. While it may be true that this exchange is manipulated to some extent by both the financial institutions, yet the main cause is the adverse balance of trade existing between these two countries.

The question naturally arises, "What does a trade balance mean?" If one country bought or imported from another exactly the same amount of goods as it sold or exported to that country there would be no so-called "balance of trade." In common phrase they would be "square." But it is hardly expected that this can come about; one must buy more than the other, one must sell more than the other. The difference between the two is the balance of trade. In normal times the balance of trade between these two countries was so narrow that no difficulty or inconvenience was experienced by our banks in adjusting the difference. As the balance widens, however, the adjusting becomes more difficult, as a result, the difficulty in adjusting, hence the exchange rate on our coin.

In view of the fact that our government has arranged credits, amount to over one hundred millions of dollars, with European countries, for the two fold purpose of providing Europe with commodities needed in reconstruction and of securing new market for the future, it is only natural that our exports to the United States should be considerably. This being the case the only solution in sight at present appears to be that we curtail our purchasing from across the line. Because of this the high rate of exchange may actually prove a blessing in disguise. For after all the balance of trade is not caused by international purchases on the part of our governments, but rather by the purchases made by individuals and business concerns. Every pair of boots, stockings, every dress, waist, or pound of food stuff which is not made or produced in Canada adds to our adverse trade balance when such commodities are purchased by Canadian consumers, and each purchase so made adds to the increase in the exchange rate on our coin. It can readily be seen, therefore, that Canadians still have a patriotic duty to perform.

Before the war in 1913 Canada had, with all countries, an adverse balance of 314 million dollars. We bought that amount more than we exported. But owing to the immense munition and food orders which came to Canada as the result of the war, and for which European countries had to pay us, there was in 1917 a favorable balance in our national trade of 557 million dollars more than we spent on imports.

Canada's prosperity depends upon a favorable balance of trade. We must either gain our share time scale of exports or restrict our imports—or both, if we are to retain in a time of peace the proud position won for Canada by the sacrifice of her men-in-arms.

AS YOU WILL IT.

Under the above heading the Swift Current Herald has something to say editorially, and it can be so nicely applied to any town or district that we reprint it. Here is what the Herald says:—

A community, be it city, town or rural, is just what the residents of that particular community make it.

Point to a city where the civic authorities are full of optimism as well as being shrewd business men; where the city's planning commission is a live organization; where the board of trade is continually on the alert placing the city on the map, before railway companies as a good railway center, advertising the city as a good distributing point, before the industrial world as a good prospect location; where business men are men of vision, boosting business by up-to-date stocks, accommodating staffs and ever and always advertising their city and their wares.

Point to a city or community such as described and just as surely as Canada as a nation is lagging to the fore, that city will not be outstripped in the race for prominence as a commercial center in this great west of ours.

To sit back at the present time and not play means a losing game. The city's future is in our hands and will be just as you will it.

APPROVES METRIC SYSTEM.

The voice of the Wall Street Journal has editorially urged the adoption of metric weights and measures by the United States.

The Journal points out that this simple and logical system was favored by the fathers of the Republic, and that throughout the history of the nation public men and economists have urged the advantages of this simple decimal system of weights and measures. It draws attention to the fact that one of the earliest orders of the war called for the adoption of metric units by British and when the United States entered the conflict America followed suit.

"Perhaps the Anglo-Saxon aversion of change would be quickly overcome," declares the Journal, "were it generally known that our measurement by eights, ounces and quarts has its origin in Germany."

The One Big Union movement has evidently reached its zenith and is now on the decline. The robot thinking labor union men never have supported it, as it meant the overthrow of trade unions. The locomotive engineers, the railway conductors, the cigar makers or the printers will never consent to let the unskilled laboring man decide how their business shall be conducted.

Almost every city and town of any size in Canada is now making request for some of the trophies which are now coming to this country. As Redcliff has made an exceptionally good showing in the number of men who left this town for the front, it seems that we are entitled to some of these trophies. We stand a poor chance of getting any if we don't ask for them. It would therefore, be in order of our council would make some move in the matter.

It has been recently discovered that the camels are coming—air-mail.

The people on Fifth street should take enough interest in the young trees on that street to water them. In a few instances this has been done and the effect is very noticeable. With proper care these trees will mark Fifth street one of the prettiest in Alberta and will make property on that street much more valuable.

Big words and small ideas make a poor combination.

Ed, the Editor, has gone to Edmonton.

Huge Financial Load of England

Speaking in support of the Victory Loan, recently floated in Britain, subscriptions to which—totalled $339,000,000, Lord Milner said:

"The treaty, concluded at Versailles, was a great step forward on the long, hard uphill road which the world must travel to recover from the struggle in history. A great deal had to be done, at home and abroad, to make that recovery anything like complete. Indeed, so much had to be done, that were it not for the recollections of the dangers escaped from and difficulties surmounted in the last four years, we should be appalled at the work which faced us. (Hear, hear.)

"Abroad, parts of Europe and Asia were in state of commotion. The great war was over, but there were destructive effects of the greatest many losses were going on in various quarters. These were not to be very formidable, but as long as they continued, and as long as civil dissension, of war continued, there would be inevitable delay in the revival of industry and the resumption of normal intercourse between nations, which was the supreme need of all the world today. (Hear, hear.)

"It would need great and combined efforts of the still prosperous, or comparatively prosperous, nations to set the less completely ruined nations, who were without food, without raw material, without credit, with a depreciated currency, and all their financial machinery out of gear—to get them on their legs again. And the more prosperous nations had got to do it, else they themselves will be dragged down by the ruin of their neighbors, and their society, infected by the anarchic and revolutionary tendencies which steyation and mismanagement have created, and which knew no geographical boundaries.

"He hoped we had reached the point, yet if we had not yet quite reached it, we were near it, where recovery would once more balance credit. We ought not, however, speaking, to have to add much more to the load of our debt. It was an immense load. But it was not only the amount of our debt that mattered, but also the nature of it. Our national debt was now to an unprecedented and alarming extent a floating debt, renewable at short intervals, a constant source of uncertainty and anxiety not only to the chancellor of the exchequer, but to the whole business-world.

"Floating Debt a Danger.
"Though hitherto this huge floating debt had given us wonderfully little trouble, a time would come, indeed we must wish that the time should come, when it would loom large, because money would be needed for other purposes, for business, for other needs, and the floating debt, during the time of emergency, and for many new enterprises. It would be a terrible anxiety to all business if the treasury was to be always in the market, scrambling for large amounts to carry over its indebtedness from quarter to quarter. It would be bad for the state and bad for private borrowers, who would be competing with the state, and such a state of affairs must impede the revival of industry and commerce.

"Financially speaking," said Lord Milner, "I am a man of my own age, and may indulge my own fancy, and say that I think nothing less than the reduction of the floating debt by something in the neighborhood of one thousand millions will be really adequate or meet the necessities of the case. The thing can be done if we choose to do it. I have only to look round at the unexpended amount of private extravagance and public extravagance, and to return the compliment. The money is available if people are willing to lend it. A great national effort of this kind could only be successful if it were carried into the heart of every house."

hold. We must get our national finances straight first, if private extravagance and public extravagance are to be fair chance, and we were to carry out the great policy of loaning money to all round, to which, for our own economic salvation and for that of the world, it was necessary that we should our undivided energies. (Cheers.)

U.S. May Stop Immigration

A bill to stop all immigration for two years and to deport all aliens who military service during the war, was introduced yesterday by Chairman Johnson, of the house immigration committee.

After the end of the two-year suspension period, all aliens who were entitled to admission to the United States only under a passport on their written declaration to become an American citizen. They would be required to register annually until citizenship was granted. Fraudulent entry would be punishable by five years' imprisonment and $1,000 fine, with deportation. Few exceptions to the prohibition of immigration for two years are permitted by the bill. Aliens who had been in the United States might be permitted for their parents, grandparents, unmarried or widowed daughters or sons under 18, unless they had been alien enemies, for whom special authorization for admission would be required. Still others might be imported under existing law, and foreign officials, tourists, students and professional men might come into the country temporarily under passport.

Union officials in central America, and laborers declare 90 percent of the men favor the proposed schedule and a general strike of all maintenance of way employees if their demands are not met.

Metric Campaign

Supported in Britannia

Word Trade Club of San Francisco is receiving daily a large number of letters from English-speaking people all over the world, pleading support to its campaign for world wide adoption of the metric meter-inter-gran.

A Lieutenant-Colonel in the British Army who is still stationed in France has written Word Trade Club as follows:

"You may be amused at the following story of a conversation of mine with two officers of the U. S. Army, American Ordnance Department with whom I made dear friends. I said: 'I have one thing about the United States which, when I realized it, filled me with horror and contempt.' This made them sit up and wonder what I was getting at. However, the quip politely asked what it was, without knowing me. I replied: 'You are using the yard measure. It is the most stupid thing I have ever known. You disagree the same. GIANTS' rights and measures as we do.' Another typical letter comes from the pastor of a large London Church. He says of the metric system: 'I am convinced that its adoption will create a greater unity among the nations, both commercially and in the means of the continuation of peace. Therefore, I hope that your efforts to this end will be a repaid with success.'"

Sullivan—Sir, I ask for your daughter Imogen's hand.
Her Father—Certainly, my boy, certainly—take the one that's always in my pocket!

Do Not Sacrifice

Your Cattle

The Department of Agriculture has appointed John Glendinning to require cattle of emigrants in Southern Alberta and dispose of them at the Calgary Stock Yards and make returns to consignors as is done by regular commission merchants. This is to check the sale of stock to speculators, buyers who are coming the country in which the people are suffering most from drought.

Owners of cattle are warned by the department that there is no need of sacrificing cattle stock at the prices which some of it is being sold for at present. The open stock yards at Calgary and Edmonton are absorbing all stock at a fair price at present. Farmers in Central and Northern Alberta are sending in orders for stock and the consigning of stock to central markets is the right method of selling. It involves the least expense to the consumer and likewise the least expense to the purchaser. The farmers of Central and Northern Alberta can nearly all stand increases to their cattle. In addition to this, there will be no less than four thousand head of cattle purchased under the Live Stock Encouragement Act during the next two months. It is desirable that these not be offered all at once but should be moved into the market gradually. The kind of stock most desired for trading and two year old calves with a limited number of dairy cows. Shippers who wish their stock to be handled by the department should consign direct to Mr. John Glendinning at Calgary. It may be consigned likewise to any of the regular commission firms at Calgary and Edmonton. The Live Stock Commissioner at Edmonton should be notified of the making of shipments in order to have forward purchasers who are getting cattle under the provisions of the Live Stock Encouragement Act. Belgian troops have occupied Namur district of Rhenish Prussia.

London, Aug. 19.—The Prince of Wales is understood in London, will command the United States for ten days on his forthcoming visit.
